History of the ANZAC biscuit

During World War One, the wives, mothers and girlfriends of the Australian soldiers were concerned for the nutritional value of the food being supplied to their men. A body of women came up with the answer - a biscuit with all the nutritional value possible. The basis was a recipe using rolled oats, sugar, plain flour, coconut, butter, golden syrup, bi-carbonate of soda and boiling water. All these items did not readily spoil. At first the biscuits were called soldiers biscuits, but after the landing on Gallipoli, they were renamed ANZAC biscuits.

The railway line has been used extensively by the military during both world wars as the link between Cairns and the Tablelands (the road was only built during the second World War). You will find an honour roll on the wall outside the ticket office at Kuranda Station and ANZAC Day services are held at Kuranda Station each year.
